Soros Foundation
Fundatia Soros pentru o societate libera si deschisa - Romania

The world is currently going through a difficult period. Our civilisation is very advanced and it has become global in scope. This entails a tremendous increase in our power over our environment. If our understanding cannot keep pace with our power, we are risking a catastrophe of unprecedented proportions.

Our hopes that after the collapse of the Soviet empire the totalitarian, closed society would be replaced by an open society were not quite fulfilled. It is dangerous to generalise, but it is possible to discern a pattern emerging. It consists of nationalist ideologies combined with big business interests - the classic recipe for fascism or national socialism. Recent history shows that the building of an open society takes more time and greater effort than expected. It requires a new set of values, a different way of thinking.

In my philosophy, open society is based on the recognition that we all act on the basis of imperfect understanding. Nobody is in the position of knowing the ultimate truth. Therefore, we need a critical mode of thinking; we need institutions and practices that allow people with different views and interests to live together in peace; we need a democratic form of government that ensures the orderly transfer of power; we need a market economy that provides feedback and allows mistakes to be corrected. Above all, we need the rule of law. In a closed society, society is dominated by the state, and the state is in the service of a dogma that claims to embody the ultimate truth. In such a society there is no freedom. Open society is a sophisticated, abstract idea. How can it compete with simpler, more concrete ideas such as my family, my tribe, my country, right or wrong. People may be willing to die for king and country; are they willing to die for an open society?

The world is badly in need of some guiding principles to govern relations between states and also within states. The maxim that states have only interests but not principles is clearly inadequate. I believe that the concept of open society offers a better guide. How can it be translated into rules and institutions that will preserve peace in the world? That is a difficult question which requires careful deliberation. I cannot answer it on my own; we must work it out together.

VI

Every year, the introduction to the Annual Report of the Soros Foundation for an Open Society emphasized the growth of the budget, the prestige and range of the SFOS activities. In 1994, we insisted on the fact that a process for the SFOS institutional building had started, which, we believed, was going to be long and difficult. In fact, the development of the Foundation, as an institution with its own rules and decision-making structures, was shorter and more efficient than we imagined at first.

The institutional development of the Soros Foundation in Romania required a change in its legal frame. The seven legal initiators of the Romania Foundation: Adam Muller, Salat Levente, Vera Campeanu, Thomas Kleininger, Constantin Fugaru, Andor Horvath and Alin Teodorescu, were replaced, as founding members, by 29 personalities of the public and scientific life in Romania, in accordance with the Romanian law. The respective legal act had a wider meaning: in 1990, there were very few who believed in the necessity and viability of the George Soros-financed Foundation for Romania. Five years later, it was no longer difficult to form a new General Assembly, made up of morally and professionally valid personalities, champions of the idea of open society in Romania, and also conversant with the levers of financing through the Romania Soros Foundation.

A considerable amount of the efforts at that point went towards re-writing norms, regulations and criteria to operate in the decision-making process of the Foundation. It was in 1995 that we had the first financial regulations, drawn up at a European level. The assets and inventory of the Foundation were controlled and recorded in accordance with the provisions of the Romanian laws and of international standards. The staff was re-trained, and a better institutional discipline became the rule. Those changes were necessary. The process was made easier by the fact that an important part of the executive attributions that the SFOS President had, in conformity with the old rules, were transferred to a team of direct management, competently co-ordinated by Anca Harasim and Alan Johnson. The programs and projects developed further, without being in any way affected by the process of institutional development. An analysis of this Report will show the growth in diversity of the programs and the increase in the quantity of donations. It is surprising to see how much energy and creative abilities emerged through the redistribution of the executive duties, through the clarification of the relations between the National Council, the specialized boards and the SFOS staff. The communication with the public in Romania has also improved considerably. The Soros Foundation for an Open Society, Romania, became an institution of the civil society in less than five years, in a country where there had not been any foundations, and any civil society in the real sense of the word. This in itself is to be considered an achievement.

1995 was the last year of my leadership of the SFOS National Council in Romania. It was a joy to work with all those inside and outside the Foundation. It was a unique experience to work with George Soros, a man whose thinking and action have brought a change in the deeper texture of today's Romanian society: not only through building the Foundation, as an institution, but also by means of the change in mentalities, by overcoming the prejudices of a culture that had been deeply devastated by the ordeals of our recent history. I hope that the institution created by his ideas and resources - and our efforts will keep its profile and efficiency.

Alin Teodorescu

“We must switch from a sprint to long distance running.” George Soros

What the Soros Foundation for an Open Society in Romania tried to achieve in the first five years was to make a difference indeed - that is to say, to implement a fundamentally different approach to democracy assistance in Romania.

SFOS-Romania, as part of a vast international network, has distinguished itself by two features: a definitely decentralized structure - the three local branches of Cluj, Iasi and Timisoara included; and the full reliance on local staffed bodies for the decision-making and for the management of programs. That resulted in a more accurate assessment of needs, and a more efficient designing of programs. In the process, interactive means were developed, for the training of experts in priority fields.

The Foundation started mainly by making itself available for requests and initiatives coming from the Romanian society. That meant a great openness in finding the fields that needed the involvement of the Soros Foundation for an Open Society - Romania. As time went by, that kind of interaction brought to the fore the important domains which the Foundation was called to assist by programs having a wide impact. It helped, too, in finding the best ways and methods for the development of programs. The variety of the beneficiaries only shows the variety of the potential agents of change within the Romanian society. Such variety in fact makes it hard to measure the impact of the Foundation accurately.

We hope that you will find the presentations and financial information in this volume relevant and interesting. We also hope that this new Annual Report succeeds in suggesting the progress in the quality and impact of our programs.

Around its fifth anniversary, the Soros Foundation for an Open Society, Romania, initiated a thorough evaluation of the substance of its programs. Some of the programs initiated in the previous years were continued, or finalized; room was left for new initiatives, coming from the main fields, newly comprised among the activities of our Foundation.

There are three major fields of programs, presented as such in the respective chapters of the Report: education, communication and programs for the civil society. Moreover, it was considered very important to continue the programs promoted by the Soros Center for Contemporary Arts, as well as to develop medical programs.

The Soros Foundation for an Open Society in Romania has carefully pursued the policy of supporting individual and group initiatives, and to interrelate them in a coherent and responsible process meant to lead to the self-development of civil society. The Development of Civil Society program is an open door for all those who want to implement an idea and have the power to bring it to fruition. It is a genuine source for other programs, too. The program focuses on projects born from social action and stimulates constructive initiatives - so it allows the sense of communication from the society to the Foundation.

The program for co-financing projects and providing travel grants is designed to support the development of the Romanian academic community and helps Romanian students and professors to participate in the events, exchanges, training and research of the international academic community.

Decentralizing education, gaining diversity and flexibility of the educational system in Romania rely on informing young students and their parents about their options. The Soros Foundation for an Open Society remains involved in the reform of higher education, and participates in the project for the reform of pre-university education, in the fields of management and financing - which will reinforce the impact of reform, its efficiency in the Romanian institutions for education; these programs have sought to relate the Romanian educational system to the newer developments of Western education. Computer donation to schools has been the most successful program in this direction, so far.

The programs for assistance to non-governmental organizations were also continued in 1995. An aim of these SFOS programs was to facilitate the communication of Romanian NGOs and professional associations with their counterparts abroad.

Journals of prestige, which were the only ones to preserve a degree of independent cultural expression during the communist regime, succeeded to survive after 1989, greatly due to the assistance by the Soros Foundation for an Open Society. Seminal books, a variety of very important volumes were printed either through direct SFOS support, or under the program of translations managed by the Open Society Press.

Institutional development is a priority field of action for all organizations which propose themselves to support the dynamics of transition. Mention should be made of the programs for public local administration, involvement of the national network of English language schools, development of the educational advising centers in Cluj and Iasi, as well as of the Advisory and Placement Center in Bucharest.

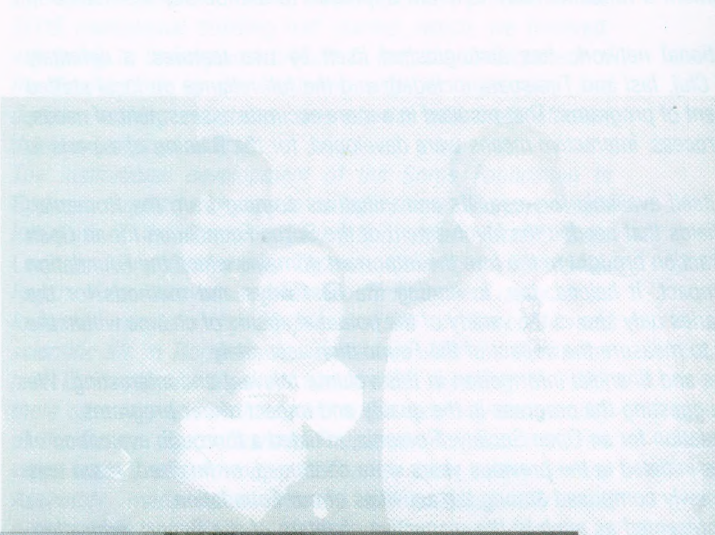

Modernization of libraries all over the country, growth of mass-media institutions, reform of national book production in the frame of the free market competition, all have had a connection with the Soros Foundation for an Open Society.

However multiple - sometimes even divergent, and however difficult to anticipate, the impact of the SFOS programs has been, all of them have steadily aimed at implementing the mission of the Foundation: the global project for an open society. The programs cannot be “revolutions”, but they will not deny the purpose which was attached to them by the founder of the organization, George Soros: the programs should be operational means toward the idea of an open society. The “Soros” concept is much more than a radical transformation of the world, through methods pertaining to gradual social engineering (see Karl Popper). It aims at rendering operational a basic philosophical paradigm which others will merely debate on.

Any analysis and statement of past activities supposes a new beginning. At the end of five years of activity and at the beginning of the sixth, here we are, facing the question: (while imperfection is the lot of human mind...) how imperfect is our understanding of open society?

FINANCIAL REVIEW FOR 1995

1995 was a year of transition for the Foundation; with the implementation of an appropriate set of financial regulations and a comprehensive review of the internal control systems.

The changes were necessary to ensure not only the financial vitality of the organisation, which celebrated its fifth anniversary in 1995, but also to prepare it to meet the future challenges, having a strong financial infrastructure and financial systems.

Revenues

The revenues for the year totalled $ 11,295,000, which compared to $ 9,966,989 in 1994 was an increase of 13%.

The Foundation receives the majority of its funds from Mr. Soros, in the form of national, regional and special allocations.

Whilst the Foundation sets its own program priorities for the national allocation, it also participates in regional programs offered by the Open Society Institutes- New York and Budapest and assists in student selection for scholarships for the Central European University, which all form part of the Soros network world-wide.

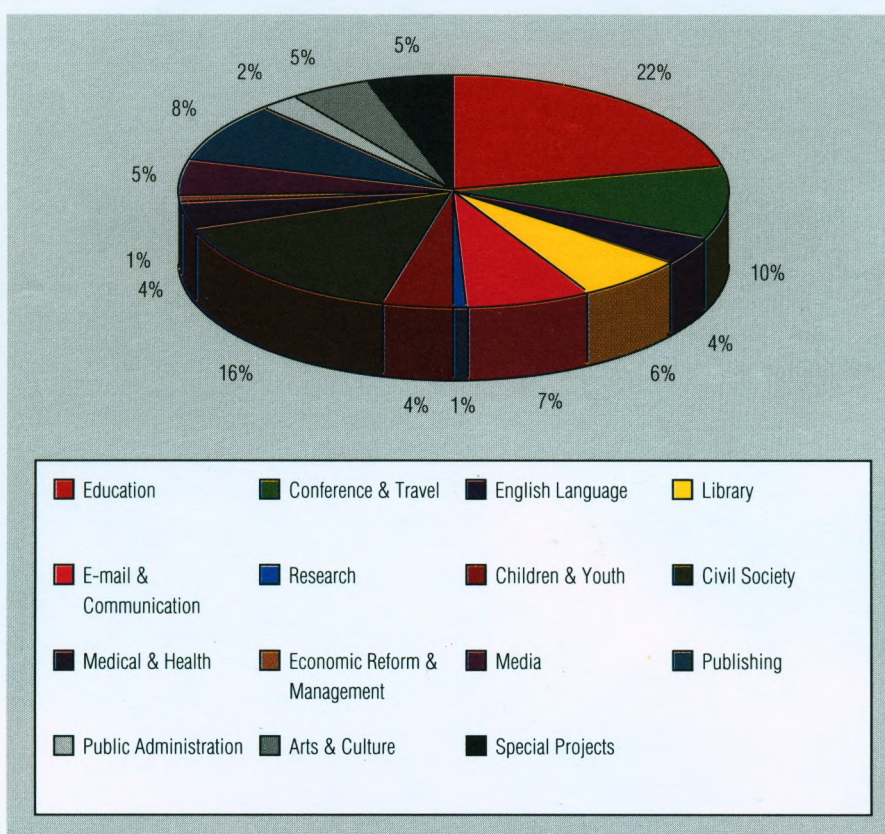

The Foundation also attracts many contributions, both in terms of finance and in-kind resources, from partners and commercial companies. These sources were valued at circa $1 m. in 1995, but do not feature in these accounts.

Expenditure

The expenditure for the year was $ 9,660,000.

The foundation develops both grant-giving programs to individuals, groups, organisations and institutions and also initiates and manages its own projects. In 1995, 51% of total spending was in the form of grants.

The following tables show the various categories and percentages of spending and the range of program areas.

The annual report describes each program and project and gives information on the many grantees who have secured support.

Grant sums are shown in either dollars, which is the reporting currency for the Foundation, or in the national currency, Lei.

The average value of the leu against the dollar for 1995 was 2029.44.

In addition to national and regional allocations the Foundation received special allocations from Mr. Soros which enabled us to continue with the construction of the Cluj branch office extension, which will also house an extensive library, conference room, English language school and the E-Mail/ Internet communications node and training facilities; and to purchase the freehold of the office space for the Bucharest office.

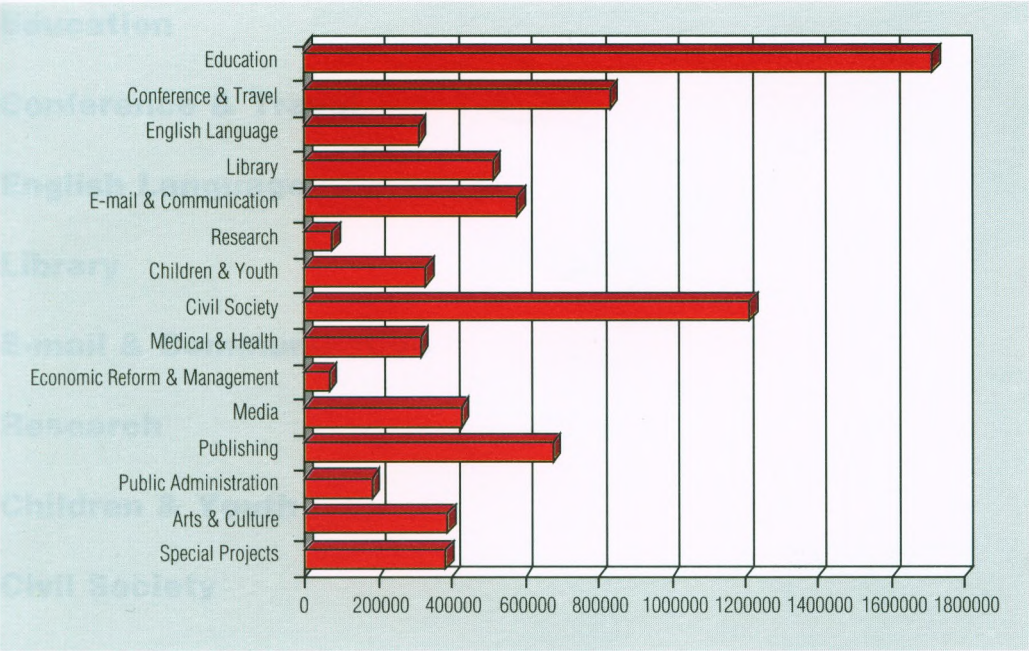

The Foundation is a decentralized organisation, having its headquarters in Bucharest and branches in Cluj, Timisoara and Iasi.

Balances

The balances carried forward at the year end were $2,102,000, which represented a considerable increase on the opening balance of $467,000.

This increase is accounted for by:

- 1) The value of medical equipment donated from the United States and destined for onward donation to selected hospitals, which was in the process of resolution – $886,000; and
- 2) The late receipt of the December 1995 national and regional funds transfer – $653,000.

Conclusion

From the perspective of a "Brit" working abroad for the first time the personal and professional challenges have been many, each being addressed and resolved in a pragmatic way- including the environment, culture, legislative framework and language. I feel privileged and proud to be working with a team of dedicated, responsive and highly talented people (Board members and staff colleagues), and for an Organisation which has emerged as a leading force in Romania for developing the attitude and institutions necessary to build a strong open and free society.

EDUCATION 1,713,000 USD

1. Scholarships 291,000 USD

The Foundation offers scholarships in order to provide training in areas not yet developed in Romania, to encourage encounters with other cultures, and to start co-operation between Romanian and foreign scholars.

Whilst almost all scholarships (with the exception of some summer schools) have been abroad, there is now an increased tendency in setting special courses in Romania, with the co-operation of foreign universities, and the financial support of the Soros Foundation. Still, the great number of applications filled in for fellowships abroad prove that there is a strong interest and openness to other cultures, as opposed to the closeness of the pre-1989 system.

The fellowships offered in 1995 fall in two large categories: long-term (one year and more) and short-term (less than six months, usually several weeks). Most fellowships are at the graduate level, with the exception of the American University in Bulgaria, and some summer schools, for undergraduate level. The long-term graduate fellowships are in the UK (Oxford University, Manchester University), France (Écoles Normales Supérieures, Institute for Higher European Studies Nice), Hungary and Czech Republic (Central European University, Center for Economic Research and Graduate Education). Short-term fellowships are offered for courses held in a multitude of countries, both in Western and Central Europe, and in North America.

Long-term courses:

■ Pensionnaires Roumains des Écoles Normales Supérieures 127,520 USD

Courses leading to Master's degrees in Humanities and in Sciences; co-operation with the French Embassy and the Romanian Ministry of Education

2. Advising Centers

185,000 USD

The Advising Centers that have been set up by the Foundation fall in three categories:

- advisory and placement centers
- study-abroad advisory centers
- information desks

The advisory centers in Bucharest and Iasi are dealing with placement matters only (starting with designing a psychological profile of the applicants, down to maintaining databases of job offers and demands); the advisory center in Timisoara deals with study-abroad matters; the advisory center in Cluj does study abroad and career advising.

The centers offer both individual advising and group advising. They organize conferences and workshops on specific topics, and provide small libraries with the latest publications in their field of interest.

The information desks function in Suceava and Arad

■ Advisory and Placement Center – Bucharest 67,948 USD

Maintains a database of job offers and profiles of job seekers; offers advice on finding jobs, and on recruiting staff

■ Student Advisory and Placement Center – Iasi 29,407 USD

Similar to the center above

■ Educational Advising Center – Cluj 31,844 USD

Assistance to co-operation between Romanian and foreign Higher Education institutions; study-abroad advising; career advising; proposal-writing advising

3. HESP – Higher Education Support Program 287,000 USD

HESP programs provide support for higher education institutions: equipment donations, setting-up of academic departments, in-country doctoral fellowships for academics, visiting professors. The aim of these programs is to improve the teaching and learning process by providing better access to resources; to allow for curricula reform whenever needed; to provide contacts with Western Academia; to encourage student research projects; to promote student research; to provide teaching materials to universities; to involve academics in the public life.

Donations under the HESP programs have been organized under three categories, each including several types of expenditures:

4. Computer Centers

The computer centers represent the technical environment that would support communities by providing access to electronic resources and to training in using them. The main functions of the centers are: to offer Internet access, mainly to academic communities and NGOs, to house Internet servers, to develop Web-pages and store relevant information on the Soros Foundation, to support other programs needing data, computer training or e-mail assistance.

■ Computer and Communication Center - Cluj	57,879 USD
■ Computer and Communication Center - Iasi	83,369 USD
■ Computer and Communication Center - Timisoara	48,996 USD
■ Training and Educational Center - Miercurea Ciuc	38,975 USD
■ Equal Chances - computers for High Schools	179,884 USD

5. Head-Start Program

536,963 USD

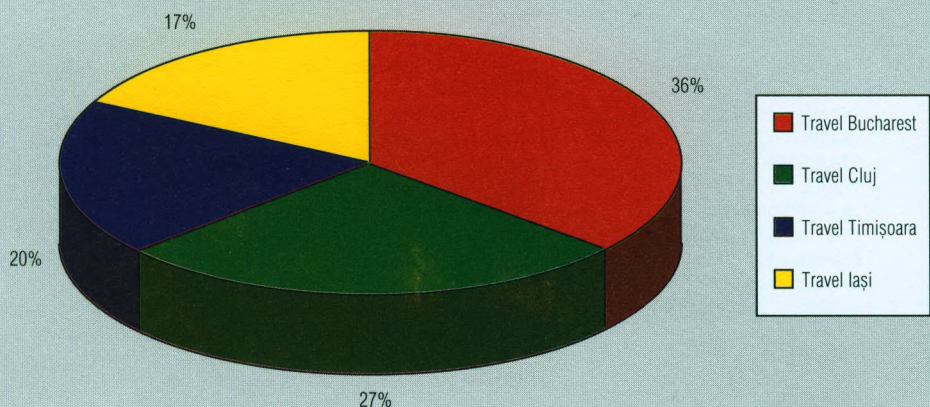

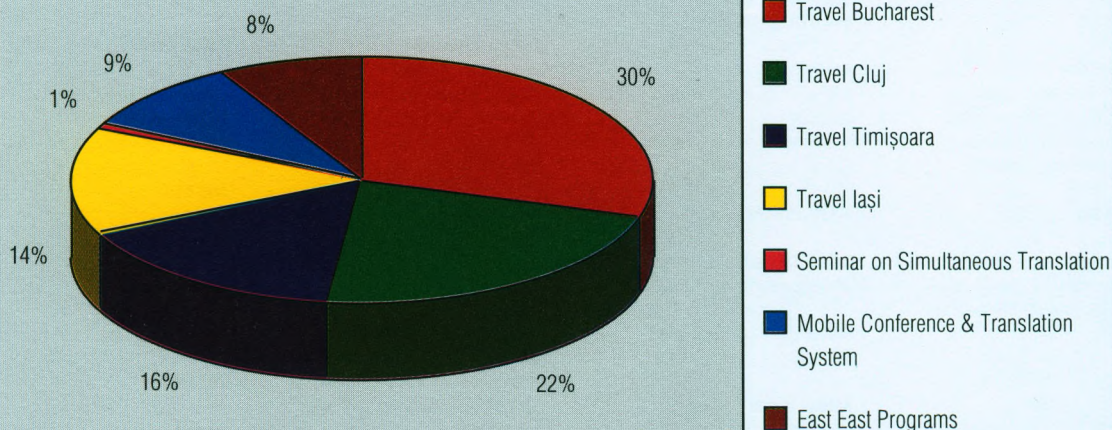

This is a program of education and social protection addressed to children from three to six years of age and to their families. It was designed to meet specific needs and cultural traditions of the Romanian pre-school education system, and also to implement a new methodology in education. A very important part of the financial support was dedicated to the training of the staff involved in the program. Besides the training sessions, permanent technical assistance is also available. The program is run in conjunction with the state system, having the support of County Inspectorates, and being implemented in an ever increasing number of kindergartens. The program has the support of the Institute of Educational Studies and the approval of the Ministry of Education.

Pilot Head Start classrooms were set up in the following cities:

Alexandria, Kindergarten No. 8
Botoșani, Kindergarten No. 22
Bucharest, Republica Kindergarten
Călărași, Kindergarten No. 4
Cluj, Kindergarten No. 73
Constanța, Kindergarten No. 2
Galați, Kindergarten No. 43
Tîrgoviște, Kindergarten No. 13
Tulcea, Kindergarten No. 3
Satu Mare, Kindergarten No. 11

Travel 832,000 USD

TRAVEL 832,000 USD

Financial assistance under this heading includes three main categories:

- Awarding travel grants for participation in courses or conferences
- Supplying mobile translation equipment for conferences and providing training on simultaneous translation
- East-East Programs - grants awarded for Romanian participants in East-East events: conferences, congresses, meetings, summer schools, etc. organized in Eastern European countries with participants from this part of Europe.

1. Travel Grants 683,000 USD

Travel grants are awarded separately in the four offices of the Foundation, according to similar principles and procedures. The priorities in awarding the grants are organized according to the field of study (or of work), and to the importance of the participation. Another priority factor is the site of the event: Eastern Europe has precedence over Western Europe, and over the rest of the world.

Travel grants comprise travel fares and other expenses related to participation in congresses, conferences or courses abroad. Small top-up funds for fellowships abroad have also been awarded.

English Language 310,000 USD

English Language 310,000 USD

There is a large variety of English language programs promoting the widespread good-quality teaching of English. Grants are offered to the English-language schools, partly self-supported, that have been set up with partners abroad (International House, The British Council). Courses are offered in Edinburgh for the training of English language students and teachers. Provision was also made for programs organized in partnership with the British Council, aiming at improving the conditions of teaching English in schools.

■ International Language Centre - Iași 52,970 USD

■ International House English Language School - Timișoara 32,811 USD

■ Multimedia and English Language Resource Centre - Iași 20,003 USD

■ English Language Courses at IAELS Edinburgh 54,466 USD

Library 514,000 USD

Library 514,000 USD

Programs under this heading include the creation of Soros Foundation libraries and support for other Romanian libraries.

The two libraries created by the Foundation function in Cluj and Timișoara, and are mainly focused on social sciences, humanities, also including interesting volumes on law, on management and periodicals.

Donations are mainly offered to university libraries, but also to other types of libraries (school, public, hospital), and aim at offering access to good quality books and publications not yet affordable by libraries themselves.

Courses were financed for the specialization of librarians, and provision was made for the automation of several Romanian university libraries.

■ The Library of the Soros Foundation in Cluj - 40,712 USD

Functions within the office in Cluj, and is opened to public access every day of the week except Friday and Sunday; publications may be either read in the library or borrowed for periods lasting up to one month; readers are also entitled to a given number of pages to be photocopied - all these services are free of charge

■ The Library of the Soros Foundation in Timișoara - 17,993 USD

Functions within the office in Timișoara, with similar features as the one in Cluj, but of smaller dimensions

■ The Book Foundation - 70,761 USD

A non-profit book-shop was opened in Bucharest, offering science books otherwise inaccessible to the local scientific community

■ Donations of Books, Periodicals and Encyclopaedias 162,334 USD

Donations to libraries all across Romania, also donation of Romanian-language handbooks and books to the Romanian ethnic communities in Moldova and Ukraine and support for a program of visits to Bucharest of Romanian-ethnic children from war-ridden town Tiraspol. Soros Foundation also paid the transportation costs for a donation of books offered by Brother's and Brother Company to Romanian Libraries.

■ Research Support Scheme – 2,246 USD

Children and youth 332,000 USD

Children and youth 332,000 USD

Projects under this heading aim at offering interesting educational programs for children at secondary school level. Regular school education may be enriched with peer counselling, debate and health education programs launched in schools all over the country. The Youth program offers grants for implementing student projects, teaching them to assess needs, find solutions, write proposals and manage small projects. The Secondary School Exchange and Youth for Understanding Germany program offer five-week to one-year fellowships in the USA, UK and Germany, respectively.

Civil Society

Civil Society 1,228,000 USD

1. Interethnics 115,000 USD

An important set of programs were developed for the increase of inter-ethnic understanding among groups living in Romania. The programs are meant to contribute to the harmonious development of the society and to counterbalance political use of nationalism and ethnic tensions. A special accent is put on Romanian-Hungarian understanding, were grants encourage translations and a common version of History handbooks. Programs include the organization of debate groups, the production of surveys and the publication of press reviews.

The programs for Roma groups are mainly oriented towards eliminating prejudices, and creation of counseling groups in schools.

■ Training and research on inter-cultural issues - 8,702 USD support for training on inter-cultural issues; grants for short-term research in the field

■ Cooperation between Romanian and Hungarian historians - 27,185 USD support for cooperation in the form of travel-grants for documentation trips on historical aspects concerning the common history, grants for organizing workshops and seminars and for the publication of joint research works laborării dintre British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), British Know-How Fund, Teatru și Film din București și Fun-

invitate, și profesori. Din numărul la portile sale sunt prioritare cei care în trei luni de cursuri, principiile eticii jurnalistice, echilibrului în relatări, cu activităților din presă, mergând la managementul stațiilor comerciale.

utilizarea lor. Presa românească, deși lipsită de povara cenzurii și avatările centralismului, suferă de o anumită lipsă de profesionalism. Unul din telurile Școlii BBC este să-i ajute pe cursanți să depășească deficiențele specifice procesului mediatic românesc. Cursurile cuprind de la elementele de marketing și management până la tehnici de interviu. Până în iulie 1995, cursurile școlii BBC au fost absolvite de 74 de jurnaliști radio și 34 jurnaliști TV.

Media 419,000 USD

During 1995, media programs focused on journalist training and on the update of communication environment. The global aim was the democratization of Romanian media, and the results planned were to increase both the quality of media output and accessibility to sources. Training programs have been organized both in Romania and abroad, and financing was mainly joint with partners such as The Know-How Fund and PHARE.

Grants have been awarded to programs that made provision for an increase in quality and for the management of media services.

Publishing

Publishing 676,000 USD

The purpose of the publishing programs is to support the development of a strong and independent Romanian book industry.

The forms of support are:

- grants to publishers or individuals to support books which promote the values of an open society and which are needed and requested on the Romanian market; the grants are awarded for those Romanian titles and translations that promote critical thinking and intercultural understanding in the various fields such as: social and political sciences, history, sociology, economics, Romanian and universal literature, etc.
- grants to support the publication and distribution of academic, cultural and professional magazines which contribute to the scientific and cultural life through the intellectual dialogue, translation of foreign articles, critical texts, book reviews, and scientific articles;
- professional training for publishers, distributors and booksellers provided by Western experienced specialists.

Publishing programs run in 1995 were:

■ Training Support for Textbook Provision in Romania	50,098 USD
■ Publishing program	301,539 USD

Public Administration

209,000 USD

The Public Administration Program offers financial support for projects that aim to improve the results of the activity of the Local Governments. Priority was given to the projects from the following categories: diagnostic studies, training, pilot projects, equipment and services.

■ Urban Planning Project - Oradea 32,269 USD

■ Total Quality Maintenance Project 32,088 USD

■ PROLOG - Sponsoring the local administration 114,507 USD

Grants were awarded on a competitive basis and according to the quality and effectiveness of the proposals. The main target group consists of local government officials (elected, appointed or employed). Other target groups that strongly interact with local government activity have been identified to be: NGO activists, mass media representatives and, indirectly, citizens.

area EUROARTIST BUCUrești - Eroul din Carpați (Olimpiu Gandalac, Teodor Graur) reprezintă participarea românească la a patra ediție internațională de artă contemporană de la Istanbul (10 noiem-brie - 10 decembrie). Realizată cu sprijinul Centrului Soros pentru Ar-ta Contemporană, această lucrare a stat alături de realizări ale unor artiști consacrați în peisajul artistic in-ternațional: Marina Abramovici,

Nam June Paik, Nedolko Solakov,
Rebecca Horne ș. a.

Aflată la a doua ediție, expoziția
a Centrului Soros pentru Artă Contemporană a reunit lucrările a 12 artiști și grup artistice din București și din țară sub titlu MEDIA CULPA. Video instalații, proiecții acțiuni au animat spațiul expozițional, pu-nând în discuție rolul mass media în cotextul societății românești contemporane.

Arts & Culture

394,000 USD

Most of the arts programs were managed by SCCA - Soros Center for Contemporary Art.

The reason for the creation of SCCA is that an important element of building an open and harmonious society is represented by the cultural manifestations.

The main aim of the center is to support Romanian contemporary art, as well as to promote it. It is part of a network of similar centers created in most former communist countries, meaning to establish an efficient system of international co-operation. The center runs regional programs, issues a quarterly magazine, and acts as a center for documentation and for the promotion of visual arts and of performance arts, also providing information on international cultural life.

The programs run in 1995 were:

■ International Arts Exhibitions
8,990 USD

Participation of Romanian artists in international exhibitions

■ Intensive Courses for Young Puppet Artists 9,972 USD

Courses organized for young Romanian puppet artists

■ Performing Arts 123,047 USD

Five Years Already: What a Difference Each Day Makes!

Anniversaries are occasions to draw lines and add up. When one looks back at 5 years of Soros Foundation presence in Romania, the figures speak for themselves: a total of over 21 million dollars have helped over 6,000 individuals and organisations. As we contemplate the opportunities made possible by these millions of dollars we are tempted to say: what a difference 5 years make!

But to think about this period only cumulatively would be a mistake. Looking at $21 million obscures the fact that, while impressive to be sure, it is not the total sum that really counts. Other organisations spend money, and far larger sums than this exchange hands in Romania every day!

What makes these 21 million stand out from all the other hundreds of millions circulating in Romania is the process through which they are allocated: it is the fact every one of those dollars is weighted against a dream; an individual project and a person's ability to pursue it. It is not the five years but each day that counts, and not an abstract sum of money but each person that matters! Every day at the Foundation the same question is discussed over again: can this person, and that project make a difference? Will this program help Romania become a more open, more democratic, and more accomplished country? Will this project and that person help society change, become more tolerant, more demanding of its own ability to recognise and reward merit, and more empowering toward its individual citizens? These questions, discussed day after day by dozen of people, in myriad juries and commissions, deliberating so that no single bias influences decisions but the best people and projects get rewarded, are what sets the Foundation apart. The test of each grant is: will it help Romania close faster the gap separating it from the other democratic open societies in the West?

It is these hundreds of individual decision - more so than the millions of dollars - that are the measure of the Foundations success. Every day, when the lights go off in the Soros offices, and everyone goes home with the accomplished feeling of having made a small, but meaningful difference in someone's life who will, in turn, help others change themselves and their environment...that's when the Foundation has accomplished its mission - and the money is just a means to get there!

Sandra Pralong

Page 2: Impact Study: The Soros Foundation 1990 -

The Soros Foundation for an Open Society in Romania celebrates five years of activity. The article entitled „The Power of an Idea” is a short history of the foundation's development.

The first years were „The Pioneering Years”: 1990-1991. In 1990, the „open society” was, at its best, an abstract idea. Apart from the difficulties common to all East European countries, there were at least two specific problems: the Foundation was regarded by the nationalistic groups as acting against the „Romanian interests”, and the government representatives often accused the foundation for supporting the opposition's interests! Those accusations diminished in time, as the Foundation managed to convince everybody that its actions were not party-oriented. The strategy of this achievement was based on two principles:

- the Foundation promoting an open society is in itself an open society;

- it is important not only the amount of the financial support, but also the way it is given; 1993 was a cross-roads year, the year in which the Soros Foundation for an Open Society overcame suspicious. Political attacks diminished. Branches were open in Cluj, Iași and Timișoara. The executive of the Foundation changed, as Sandra Pralong was replaced by a team led by Alin Teodorescu and Anca Harasim.

1994-1995 are regarded as the maturity years, in which the Foundation defined its role in Romanian society. The echo in the audience is more and more in accordance with the expectations. The Foundation managed to impose the image of a constant supporter of civil society, of educational processes and intelligentsia, in an attempt to facilitate contacts between the members of open societies. After five years, a conclusion seems to be obvious: the „open society” is no longer an abstract idea.

„The Strategy for the 1996 Programmes” shows that the main trends of the Foundation's activity in 1996 will include the programme for communication (29%), the programme for education (26%) and the programme for the civil society development (26%). The Foundation will go on supporting the programme for culture and art (8%), the programme for medicine and health (2%), as well as the travel grants (9%). 35% of the 1996 projects will be new ones. Pride of place will be given to programmes carried out in co-operation with other partners interested in the promotion of the open society.

The development of the non-governmental sector is one of the Soros Foundation's objectives. To this aim, the Foundation supported the participation of representatives of the East European countries in the Third Annual central and East-European Fundraising Training Conference in Prague, during 24-27 September. The aim of the Conference was to set up fund-raising strategies. The Conference showed the main financing programmes for East-Europe, and workshops were organised and concrete cases of fund-raising were also presented. In order to improve co-operation between the non-governmental organisations, the traditional meeting of the Romanian Information Centre (CRI) took place in York in an attempt to improve the co-operation between the British and Romanian NGOs.

Also in York courses were held concerning the specific NGO activity, and a presentation of the situation in Romania was made. Lorita Constantinescu, representative of the Soros Foundation, spoke about the position of the NGOs in Romania and the problems the non-governmental sector has to face.

„Mass-media and Democracy” describes the programme entitled „Building Democracy in Mass-Media”, which was initiated by the Hellenic Foundation for Foreign Policy in 1993 and which aims at training radio and television journalists from Romania, Albania, Bulgaria and Russia. The seminar was attended also by professors Phyllips Haynes (Emerson College in Boston), Connie Timson and Dr. Howard Frederick. The experience in Athens was commented upon and extended in a follow-up seminar held in Bucharest between October 5-8. At the same time, the Internet training course was resumed. Dr. Frederick, the teacher of this course, believes this network can help the non-governmental sector. „The «Feher Laszlo» painting exhibition - a bridge between two cultures” speaks about an exhibition organised in Cluj to celebrate five years from the inauguration of the Soros Foundation. The exhibition was the result of the co-operation between four prestigious institutions from Romania and Hungary and, according to Mrs. Neray Katalin's remark, it was „an excellent example of cultural bridge between two countries and people”.

The Reform of the Education in Romania consists mainly in the change of the set of handbooks used in schools. The programme concerned with this change - described in the article entitled „New Handbooks for Romanian Students” - is financed by the World Bank, which has prepared the tender documentation for the second grade handbooks together with the Ministry of Education. Another participant in this programme is the International Book Development (IBD) which offers specific consultancy in the field through the financial aid of the Know-How Found. Following the tender of July, three handbooks of Romanian Language and mathematics as well as two of sciences were approved and will be available in schools by September 1996. By February 1996 teachers will be able to choose the handbook they want to teach according to their preferences. The alternative handbooks system will lead to the disappearance of the unique handbook. The Know-How Found and the Soros Foundation will assist in the training of the country inspectorate people involved in this programme, in five centres throughout the country, with the help of the IBD.

„A Modern Programme: Computers for high schools” features the presentation of the programme regarding the computerisation in high schools Nicolae Sandu made in Budapest, at the Conference on Education for an Open Society, a successful programme taken as an example by other countries as well. The programme concerned with communications through computers began in 1992. Two hundred schools and high schools were endowed with Informatics laboratories and were connected to Internet. Thirteen thousand computers and twenty five hundred e-mail addresses were available to the students. The effects of this programme were the strengthening of the teacher-students relationships, the setting up of several student magazines and the strengthening of the communication with young people of other countries.

The setting up of the Multi-media Centre in English in Iaşi will allow the formation of new teaching techniques („Courses for new teaching techniques”) for teaching both English and other subjects. The Centre owns a wide range of didactic materials.

Page 5: Interview & Programme for Internet

My visits to Romania have become very calm”, stated Patricia Klecanda, director general for East European foundations, in the interview she gave on her last visit to Romania. During the first years it was very hard to explain to people what a foundation was and what philanthropy meant. Romania had been an extremely closed society and the foundation began by concentrating its activity on supporting the mass-media. As a follow-up to this first programme, the programme of computerisation in high schools was born, which proved to be a great success. „I think the leading philosophy of foundation is the same: the philosophy of the open society. But each foundation of Soros network acts a different way, in accordance with the specific conditions of each country. There are also problems which exceed the borders, like those related to the educational programmes”, stated Patricia Klecanda. Almost every foundation got specialised in one programme: Poland in organising summer schools, the Czech Republic in civil spirit development programmes, Romania in computerisation of high schools programmes. „We can speak of an organic development of the Foundation. To me it is very important to see the Foundations employees have developed their management skills and knowledge. I know some regional programmes applied in Romania were well applied in New York”.

The article called „New High Schools Connected to the International Computer Network” describes the „pilot programme for communications” of the Mellon Foundation developed in Cluj, which is managed by the Soros Foundation due to the existing infrastructure. The programme consist in endowment with computers and the connection to the international network of 5 high schools in the Cluj country. The advantages of the students access to Internet are obvious.

The Conference „NGO Development” took place in Salzburg between 6 and 13 October. The participants were NGO representatives from all the continents. Mihaela Lambriu, from Soros Foundation Romania, has presented a report on NGO development in Romania.

Page 8: Soros Conference & Anniversary Program

The article called „Argument for world stability” tries to resume the contents of the Conference held by George Soros at the London School of Economics on the occasion of the launching of his book „Soros on Soros”, on September 21. The Conference emphasised the need to develop the concept of „open society” as a guarantee of stability against the new political and ideological challenges.

Karl Popper remarked in his book „The Open Society and Its Enemies” that seemingly different ideologies, such as communism and fascism have lots of common traits. They promote a society claiming to be in possession of the ultimate truth. On the contrary, in an open society nobody owns the truth. The pluralism of opinions and interests represents an essential component. George Soros thinks that other successful ideologies of these days, not acknowledged as such, like the doctrine of „laissez-faire”, the libertarianism, the geopolitical realism and the social Darwinism operate against open society as well. The perfect market doctrine tends to fall into the trap of the persuasion that it holds the absolute truth. There are at least two big problems with open free market hasn't been able to solve: social justice in the redistribution of goods and the permanent financial instability. The present state of things looks a great deal like that of the end of the 19th century, when capital transfers were as often as they are today, but the two elements which conferred stability to the system at that time are entirely absent nowadays: gold as a standard of values and the British Empire as a political power guaranteeing stability. Nowadays, following the cold war, and with the influence of the „laissez-faire” ideology, the necessity of a new world order is felt in order to ensure the stability needed so as to avoid the expansion of the closed society. The United Nations failed in the attempt to play such a role and the United States seems not to want it. The NATO actions in Bosnia proved the lack of capability of the Western democracies to promote a common strategy. But such a strategy is needed, George Soros believes, in order to promote the only viable alternative: the open society. The same page hosts the program of actions organised by the Soros Foundation on the occasion of fifth anniversary.

In the leading article of this issue, Anca Harasim, Executive Director of the Foundation, shows the intention to publish a new series of the Info Soros Newsletter, which appears on the background of a reorientation in the strategy of the Foundation. „Info Soros is not only a one-way communication bridge between the Foundation and the public. By putting forward our initiatives and activities in this form, any reader has the opportunity to understand what the Soros Foundation sets itself as a task and to present his or her criticism, qualification or suggestion,” Mrs Harasim says.

In September, debates began in three Boards on which the activity of the Foundation is based: Education, Civil Society and Communication for establishing the objectives and the draft budget for 1996. The proposals were discussed within the national Board.

The article „Hopes for the Revival of the Romanian Village” highlights the support of the Soros Foundation for the Programme for young farmers (opening of a consulting centre in Bistrița and covering one third of the programme costs).

The month of October will mark some inaugurations which are shown on the same page: in Timișoara, a new computer centre (Computer Centre Timișoara) was developed and its activity began on the 1st of October. On the 9th of October, the BBC Journalism School opens up again for its third series of trainees. The meeting of the young writers at Ilieni is shown in the article „Young Writers from Central Europe Meet in Romania”. The event was part of the East-East Programme.

The article headed „Romanian Students Learn the Art of Debate” on page 4 shows the organisation of the first debate contest in Romania, at Poiana Pinului, between the 24th and the 31st of August, with an attendance of 125 trainees and 35 teachers. Two weeks before, a delegation including three trainees and two instructors ranked third at Tata, Hungary, in a debate contest of 18 attending countries.

The Training Seminar for Conflict Resolution Programmes, early in July, took place in Cluj with an attendance of 20 trainees involved in Peer Counselling (instructors were Daniel Shapiro and Craig Zelizar) and the one at Primarsko, Bulgaria, on 9-14 July, (with the participation of Dana Mareș and Marius Mares) are shown on page 4 as well. The articles „Let Us Invent Joint Projects” and „Meeting of Journalist Trainees” talk about other educational programmes of the Foundation.

Page 5: Interview & Assistance for Hospitals

„Local programmes will be the most important,” says Liz Lorient, Director for Regional Programmes in New York. In an interview given on the occasion of her presence in Romania, Lorient speaks about the reorganisation of the Foundation after five-six years of provisional operation, in order to make the message issued by the Soros Foundation much clearer. Mrs Lorient thinks Health Education and the Debate Programme are very well promoted in Romania.

The medical programmes of the Soros Foundation aim at facilitating the access of Romanian hospitals at medical equipment donations, says the article „Assistance for Romanian Hospitals”. The flash news announces that George Soros will be in Bucharest at the end of October.

Page 6: Arts, Publishing & Placement Center

The Soros Centre for Contemporary Art has this summer issued the catalogue of its exhibition MEDIA CULPA for 1994, named „010101... The Artistic Discourse - Reflex on the Community's Problems”, a genuine artistic accomplishment in itself.

The Training and Consulting Department of the Computer Publishing Centre in Bucharest has a new office and received important headings, says the article „The Training and Consulting Department: Courses on Windows 95”.

In June, the second Jobs Fair for college students took place, organised by the Advisory and Placement Centre. The results of the Fair are discussed in the article „Students Learn to Search for a Job”.

The current activity of the Soros Foundation for Visual Arts is described in the story „FVA Movies at International Festivals”.

Page 8: Seminar on Health Education

Between 12 and 16 of September, all the coordinators of the Health Education Programme in Central and Eastern Europe met in Bucharest: „Healthy People in a Healthy Society” is the heading of the article. Manners of assessing the programme suggested by Metis Associates were discussed. The proceedings were attended by Susan Shapiro, HEP Director and Co-ordinator of the Soros Foundation for Central and Eastern Europe.

On the 21st of September, George Soros launched, in a press conference in London, the book entitled „Soros on Soros: Staying Ahead of the Curve”. The volume includes three interviews with George Soros on Finance, Foundation and Philosophy.

Page 2: Summary of Education Programmes

The article "Support for the Romanian Higher Education" is a brief description of the most important components of HESP programme (High Education Support Programme). The support for the master programmes started once the approval for organizing this type of studies in Romania was obtained. In 1995, support was granted to six faculties in București and Cluj; in 1996 other faculties are to be supported by facilitating their access to the material resources, encouraging them to organize new courses, scholarships granting, etc. The young researchers find difficult to develop their research projects and HESP's goal is to back them up. Also, the programme will grant scholarships to the doctor's degree trainers and support the vocational associations in consolidating their activity. "Education Interactive Methods for Teenagers" briefs on the aims and techniques of the peer counseling seminars highly, enjoyed by the students in psychology/pedagogy.

Head Start is a programme of education and social protection meant for children of 3-6 years old and their families, which tries to introduce new methods of education. The programme started by a Convention signed between the Soros Foundation and the Ministry of Education, which enabled the launching of the programme in 1994 with more than 450 children in 9 cities. The four components of the programme are: Education (teaching the child to make decisions by himself), Health (ensurance of medical assistance), Parents' involvement (understanding the child's requirements) and Social services (assistance given to families in identifying their own needs). The programme will be extended to other 38 classes. (Article "Head Start: a New Style of Education").

Page 4: Soros Foundation's Week

This page contains short reports on some of the main events of the Week of Soros Foundation for an Open Society, organized on the 5th anniversary of the Foundation's set up in Romania, on October 23-29.

The talks focused on whether Romania is making or not for an open society. They were organized as a round table and benefited from the presence of George Soros and Romanian intellectuals, students, journalists. They discussed the chances for Romania to become an open society. The seminar on NGO's resources gathered representatives of the non-governmental sector who approached the sponsorship law and the exchange of information between NGO and business sector. The prize-winning pupils of the Foundation, who were winners of the international scientific Olympics were introduced and there was a briefing on the inauguration of the psycho-pedagogical consulting center in Iași and MEdA CULPA modern art exhibition in Bucharest.

"Soros Foundation tries to be a prototype of an open society and also to create an open society. The activity of the Foundation (in Romania) has been successful and I think that it has so far fulfilled its mission," George Soros said during his visit in Romania. The criteria used by George Soros to evaluate the Foundation's activity are: comprehension of the meaning of the concept of the open society, impact of the Foundation's activity and its efficiency. "I am not very interested in doing business in the Eastern Europe." "The presence of the Foundation here makes me be reserved in order to avoid complications". George Soros says he is more optimistic about Romania's development than about that of other countries in the area. "I think that we can talk of a slight advantage of the forces leading the country to an open society over those pulling it backwards to a closed society". "I think that the farther the Foundation stays away from politics, the more successful its goals will be."

"Cooperation between East European Journalists" is an article about the exchange of journalists between Romania and Republic of Moldavia carried on at present as part of the East-East programme in mass-media. Four Moldovan journalists are now following a programme of documentation and specialization with a Romanian daily newspaper. The programme is an attempt to capitalize the Eastern potential without Western consultancy. The article "Romania and the European Integration" informs on the conference organized by the Center for European Political Studies (CEPS) in cooperation with the Foreign Affairs Ministry and the Soros Foundation. CEPS and EU delegates, as well as Romanian politicians, participated in the conference; the talks focused on Romania's accession to EU in the perspective of the Intergovernmental Conference to be held next year. The other articles on this page brief on a book donation full of adventures in the Republic of Moldova.

Page 8: International Seminar & Travel Reports

The article "Free Information and Democratic Pluralism" reports on the international seminar held in Bucharest, organized by the French Academy of Peace and International Security, and the Soros Foundation and Phare/Tacis Programme for Democracy. The journalists have considered matters related to internationalization of the information within the regional specificity development. Experts from the Institute of Communication in Düsseldorf have presented a comparative study on the legal guarantees of different national law systems. Info Soros' goal is to present reports received from beneficiaries of the travel programmes. Sorin Antohi, Professor at the Bucharest University, wonders, after his presence at the East-West Festival in Die, "why these meetings are not held, in turn, in the countries of our area. The expenses would be low lower and the Western people would come directly in the field, where the theories on the civil society or minorities' rights could meet the facts."
